FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR 4
FROM THE BOARD OF ADVISORS CHAIR 5
IN THE GARDENS 9
GARDENS OUTREACH 29
FRIENDS OF DUKE GARDENS 44
BOARD OF ADVISORS 62
STAFF 63
Visitors to Sarah P. Duke Gardens frequently comment on all the new features and how wonderful everything looks. We know this because our ability to interact with visitors has grown dramatically along with the Gardens. Superlatives garnered last year include being listed as No. 4 among the “50 Most Stunning University Gardens” in the world. In this report, you will learn about efforts to enhance the experience here for Duke students, faculty and staff, as well as visitors from Durham and around the world.

The McNabb Family Bridge and Stream is a most beautiful and serene addition to the Blomquist Garden and counts among the several new recirculating water features we have completed in recent years or have under construction. In the Culberson Asiatic Arboretum, we created the Pine Clouds Mountain Stream, a major expansion to the Japanese garden that will open to the public this fall. On the Terraces, the refurbished Pergola is covered with native Wisteria frutescens reaching toward the top, the spring/summer displays this year have been outstanding, and we broke ground on the new Fisher Amphitheater. In the Doris Duke Center Gardens, dramatic changes begun last year continue to unfold in the area of the Virtue Peace Pond and the Spring Woodland Garden, where we broke ground on the Beverly and Bert Welch Woodland Garden Overlook. And in June, the descendants of Charlotte Brody gathered for a two-day celebration in memory of Charlotte’s centennial in the Charlotte Brody Discovery Garden, now in its fourth season of growth and continuing development.

Programmatically, dramatic growth in our work with Durham Public Schools included a 65% increase in enrollment and completion of the first year of our partnership with the East Durham Children’s Initiative. By offering regularly scheduled tours we doubled our tour revenue. And we completed a feasibility study for an expansion to the Doris Duke Center, including a redesign of the main entry experience, to better serve our growing audience as Duke, Durham and the entire region continue to grow.

It is an exciting time for Duke Gardens. The efforts of all who participate in the work of growing and nurturing this place of intense beauty and inspiration cannot be understated. They, along with friends like you, make this all possible.

As always, thank you for your support of Duke Gardens and Duke University. I hope to see you here soon.

Sincerely,

William M. LeFevre, Executive Director
Duke Gardens’ Annual Fund reached $575,000 and overall fundraising exceeded $9,000,000 in 2014 for the first time ever.

Strategic Plan Goal

Develop resources & manage operations for long-term financial strength.
What began as a trickle of ideas came to fruition this year with the construction of several dramatic water features that are alluring both to the eyes and the ears. We also began work on a new amphitheater that is sure to be a hit with Duke staff and students as well as the Triangle community. We embarked on a new prairie in the Blomquist Garden, began major repairs to the Virtue Peace Pond and finished plans for an ambitious transformation of the Spring Woodland Garden.

Culberson Asiatic Arboretum

The Japanese garden project, now known as Pine Clouds Mountain Stream, is nearing completion, with the dramatic phase one already finished. We completed the recirculating waterfall and stream and built a lovely gazebo and a storage building to assist with the Japanese tea gatherings. To help give the garden an established look, we planted about 30 very large Japanese maples, generously donated by Linda Fox, an admirer of the arboretum who spent years collecting and growing Japanese maples with her late husband, Randy. Transplanted mosses will further enhance the appearance of a time-worn setting. Work will continue through fall, with an ornamental fence and additional hardscape features. You can see a video preview at gardens.duke.edu/about/asiatic-arboretum.
Elsewhere in the arboretum, the Chinese garden is moving closer to fruition. Landscape architects from the firm Mahan Rykiel have completed conceptual plans, which will soon be presented to the Sister Cities Committee to develop a fundraising strategy.

Blomquist Garden of Native Plants

The McNabb Family Bridge and Stream, a 270-foot-long recirculating stream and 30-foot-long footbridge, were completed in spring. This new feature just to the left of the garden’s main entry is irresistible to visitors, who can’t help but be drawn to the calming sound of the flowing water, the beauty of the water’s path through boulders placed artfully by curator Stefan Bloodworth, and by the bridge’s design, featuring metalwork panels highlighting a variety of native plants found in the garden. We are grateful to John McNabb (T’66) for 650,000 pounds of stone used to create the McNabb Family Bridge and Stream.

Dramatic new water features in the Blomquist Garden, Asiatic Arboretum and Spring Woodland Garden use recirculating water.
I like when I’m surrounded by trees. It’s a change of scenery compared to inside the buildings. The air is better and it’s more relaxing. And when I have to read papers, here I can concentrate better than in the lab.

SARGIS KARAPETYAN

and his wife, Darlene, for funding this beautiful addition to Duke Gardens.

Just a short walk away, the Piedmont Prairie project began taking shape this fiscal year, a gift from the family of former Gardens Board of Advisors member Marcia Angle in her honor. Staff members spent the fall researching and collecting seeds locally in the wild. The seeds germinated over the winter, to be planted in July. Ellen Cassilly Architects designed a structure for outdoor gatherings that we hope to build in the coming winter. This important new feature, with its flowering plants and grasses, will help visitors gain insight into an increasingly rare ecosystem.

Doris Duke Center Gardens

Visitors entering Duke Gardens now have a clear starting point, thanks to the attractive new Gothic Gate Kiosk, completed late last fall. Designed by Ellen Cassilly Architects, the structure has already won a prestigious honor, Durham’s Golden Leaf Award for Neighborhood Garden & Landscape. Volunteer ambassadors at the kiosk answer questions and help newcomers decide how best to approach their Gardens visit. This is an enormous improvement in our customer service, and a big step toward interacting more meaningfully with all Gardens visitors.

The Virtue Peace Pond behind the Doris Duke Center, a focal point for weddings and other gatherings, has had severe leaks and other problems for years. Thanks to an anonymous lead gift, and additional gifts from former Board of Advisors member Anna Ho and several additional anonymous donors, we were able to drain the pond over the winter and assess the problems. After filling it again temporarily for spring wedding season, we began repairs in June, fortifying it with a concrete shell and adding new plumbing. The new shell makes the pond more shallow, which will be more conducive to displaying water lilies and other aquatic plants.

Plans for the Woodland Stream & Overlook project took shape over the past year, with work planned for late summer and fall. This project in the Spring Woodland Garden behind the Doris Duke Center will include an overlook and a recirculating stream along the existing ravine. It’ll make for a gorgeous vista to behold from the new bench installed last year in the garden.

The new Fisher Amphitheater will host Duke performances and classes, and it will be an ideal gathering spot for students to study and socialize.

STRATEGIC PLAN GOAL: Enhance the Duke student experience in memory of a young Duke alumna named Amanda Smith Johnston (T’04), who passed away in April 2014. The spiral-patterned stonework below the bench is especially beautiful, and not a day goes by that we don’t see students or other visitors enjoying the peaceful setting of this bench. We are grateful to Amanda’s family and friends for providing this alluring new resting spot.

Historic Gardens

Work on the Fisher Amphitheater began in June in the Historic Gardens near the Hanes Lawn, with completion planned for fall. The amphitheater features a series of three stone seat-walls facing a low stage edged in stone. We expect the amphitheater to be a prime location for Duke classes and performances, and for students to gather to socialize or study in the shade. The WiFi is strong at the site, thanks to recent upgrades, and we will have electrical outlets for events and for visitors to recharge their mobile devices or computers. We are thankful to Board of Advisors member Rick Fisher and his wife, Beth, for funding this exciting new feature that the Duke and Durham communities are sure to love.

Nearby, we added a new bench upstream from the Berini Bridge. This was given by Mary Berini in memory of her son, Patrick Eudy, and creates a natural sitting area in the hillside overlooking the bridge and creek. And in the Mary Duke Biddle Rose Garden, we were pleased to honor the McClendon Family with a named bench, courtesy of their dear friends in the Class of 2015.

In the Terrace Gardens, we continued with pergola-area improvements by thinning the ailing magnolias alongside... the path from the pergola to the Azalea Court, and removing the boxwood shrubs that had obscured the view from the pergola to the terraces and also prevented sunlight from reaching the pergola. We planted fragrant fortune’s tea olive (Osmanthus x fortune) in place of the magnolias, which will provide an evergreen background without shading out the new plantings. Oakleaf hydrangea, with its bold texture and summer blooms, is now growing in front of the tea olive for a nice contrast in texture. The new native wisteria is climbing nicely up the pergola, and visitors were excited to see some pretty purple blooms already this year.

We hope you enjoy this newly opened vista on your next visit, as well as all the new features and landscape improvements that were made possible in the last year by generous Gardens supporters such as you.
At Duke Divinity School we talk a lot about what makes for human flourishing, both for individuals and communities—that the work of ministry is the work of caring for souls and bodies and people in the hopes of promoting their growth. And we talk about it in a really theoretical way in the classroom, and not so much in a practical way.

But in coming here to the Gardens, I’ve seen that the work of caring for plants is a type of ministry as well. You’re looking to promote the growth of individual plants and also the whole garden. So you ask questions about flourishing, such as, “What’s the soil condition that makes for proper growth? How can we care for these plants in a way that enables them to become the full, flourishing, beautiful plants they were intended to be?”

What I’ve found is that the kinds of questions I’m asking as a student translate into the garden, and the kinds of skills I’m developing as I garden translate back into the work of ministry. It’s been a gift to learn from professionals that care deeply about Duke Gardens, and to get to work alongside them, to apprentice myself to them in this other work of caring.

Abigail Hull (D’16)
Duke Gardens work-study student
We have made remarkable progress this year in deepening visitors’ appreciation of not just the beauty of Duke Gardens but its importance as well. School children learn why plants and animals are crucial for our survival, and they learn how plants grow. Adults learn how to garden sustainably, and how to shape their landscapes to thrive and delight. And all visitors, through our ever more popular walking and trolley tours, learn more about how this world-class garden came to be, and how every exciting development—from the new Fisher Amphitheater to the recirculating water features—serves its mission as an invaluable resource for Duke and Durham.

School Programs

Duke Gardens is pleased to be a museum partner with Y.E. Smith Elementary School through the East Durham Children’s Initiative (EDCI). As one of the five museum partners, Duke Gardens hosted 80 second-grade students from Y.E. Smith on six visits over the course of the year. This was an exciting opportunity to work through a full academic year with one group of students, allowing us to develop ideas and form connections with students and play a role in the cradle-to-college goal of the EDCI.
In addition, Duke Gardens partnered with Y.E. Smith to offer a “Friday Afternoon Club” exploring nature around the school.

The Y.E. Smith partnership, coupled with the program that we and Duke’s Nasher Museum of Art provide to all Durham public school second-graders—“Double Exposure: Connecting Science and Art at Duke Gardens and Nasher Museum”—are having a significant impact on how local children understand and value nature. We are thankful for the financial support we receive that helps us offer these programs at no cost to students.

We also introduced Homeschool Programs last fall, with eight classes covering topics from basic botany, insect and animal identification to haiku poetry writing. We’re pleased with the response; 133 participants enrolled in our 23 homeschool programs in FY’15.

Children & Family Programs

Nature Adventures Camp and our other discovery programs for children continue to draw a strong following of youngsters curious about how the Earth’s plants and creatures live and grow. Our camp educators help children make critical connections between themselves and the world outside their doors.

The campers enrich each other’s understanding, too. One child from the Central African Republic attended thanks to a partnership we developed with a local organization that assists immigrant families. Water was a limited resource where she came from, so when she was working on a project here that required her to use water, she made sure she did so while standing over a plant that would also benefit from it. Such peer-to-peer lessons in conservation are priceless.

Gardens Tours & Visitor Services

Duke Gardens began offering regularly scheduled tours last year, and visitors embraced the opportunity enthusiastically, doubling our tour income and of course making people’s visits to Duke Gardens that much more memorable and gratifying.

In fall, we offered 12 tours weekly at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., and in spring we increased the tours to 16 weekly. We have almost 60 volunteer docents trained to lead tours, and we are thankful for their passion and devotion to this important service.

In addition, we expanded our commitment to visitor services by increasing the part-time visitor services coordinator position to full-time for the coming fiscal year. We look forward to sharing additional initiatives developed by our new coordinator, Sarah Leach Smith, in next year’s report.
Volunteer Programs

Our Ambassador Program continues to grow, both in participation and depth of training. We now have 42 ambassadors greeting and assisting visitors at key sites throughout the Gardens.

Thanks to our Spanish-speaking volunteers, we have a Spanish-language version of the volunteer handbook, and we had a volunteer orientation in Spanish. Duke Gardens attracts many visitors from Spanish-speaking countries, and we look forward to assisting them more ably.

We also began planning for a grand celebration of the Volunteer Program’s 25th anniversary in 2016—we look forward to toasting the volunteers’ many important contributions to the Gardens’ growth.

Education & Public Programs

The education program met its enrollment goal, with almost 2,900 enrollments in adult and family programs. Among the highlights of the year were a week-long art exhibit, and productive partnerships within Duke University and with Durham organizations.

At Duke, we worked with two classes from Nicholas School of the Environment on visitor surveys. And Jan Little, director of education and public programs, and Kavanah Anderson, coordinator of children and family education, joined the Nicholas School-led Trillium Fellows, who encourage faculty and staff to incorporate sustainability into educational objectives and connect across departments and disciplines.

We hosted Duke’s VisArts group for a “Paintout” event, and a student astronomy group gathered here with their telescopes one evening. We worked with the Nasher Museum on an afternoon workshop in conjunction with the Nasher’s Joan Miró exhibit. And we welcomed the Duke University Union Jazz Ensemble for two free swing dances organized by and for students in the Doris Duke Center.
For our second annual “Art & Nature” exhibit, we focused on the Historic Gardens and expanded the exhibit from three days to a week. Duke Gardens inspires local artists, whose creations ranged from paintings to pottery and sculpture. And Gardens fans were pleased to have more time to come see this beautiful exhibit.

Special Events

Duke Gardens had an outstanding year with special events. Revenue from rentals was $346,417, of which 60% came from weddings, 35% from Duke events, and 5% from non-profit and other related events.

Our success for FY’15 was driven by three key strategic priorities that have helped increase revenue. We expanded the walkway and created a fenced in area behind the Isobel Craven Drill classroom, which is often used as a catering room, to create more prep space for caterers to do larger events. This has given us the ability to book events for up to 200 people, enabling us to be more competitive with larger venues.

We also created a corporate events page on our website to attract more business meetings. The page has already produced inquiries and bookings from RTP and also out-of-state businesses.

In addition, Duke Performances presented another successful Music in the Gardens summer concert series. And we joined forces to present a free concert for students during “First Big Week” in fall 2014, which drew more than 800 people. For our fall 2015 planning, we focused on a special concert just for first-year students, with the hope that the Gardens will become an integral part of their years at Duke.

More than 800 students attended the free “First Big Week” concert in fall 2014, presented by Duke Gardens and Duke Performances.

STRATEGIC PLAN GOAL

Develop resources & manage operations for long-term financial strength

Among the Durham community partners we collaborated with are the Durham Forestry Department, N.C. Urban Forestry Council, Farm to Fork, the N.C. Native Plant Society, Durham Extension Gardeners, Durham Garden Forum, the Durham Beekeepers Club, the Durham Photography Club and the Triangle Orchid Society. Each year brings new partners and new ideas about how to strengthen the critical relationship between people and plants.

In addition, the Gardens’ Special Events and Education and Public Programs staff collaborated on highly publicized public events: the Durham Magazine-produced “Taste 2015” on April 24 and a Farm-to-Fork dinner on June 5. These sold-out events were Durham-centric and showcased Kirby Horton Hall and Angle Amphitheater. They also generated a lot of interest to host weddings, and we have established two important contacts that are well connected in the industry and host diverse events. They plan to work with us more in the future.

Marketing

Duke Gardens enjoyed the spotlight in a number of media this year, from Duke Magazine to Durham Magazine, Garden Gate, Chrysanthemum and Outreach NC magazines, as well as The News & Observer, and The New York Times, which featured Blomquist Garden curator Stefan Bloodworth in an article about a rare box huckleberry species. Stefan was also dubbed “a prince among plants” in an Our State magazine feature.

Duke Gardens placed No. 4 worldwide on a list of “The 50 Most Stunning University Gardens”

Be recognized as one of the best public gardens in America

UNC-TV’s “Our State” program visited in spring to film a program about the Asiatic Arboretum and the Japanese Tea Gatherings. They came back in fall for additional footage. We expect the program to air sometime in 2016. And ABC’s “Good Morning America” filmed an interview here with shark bite survivor Hunter Treschl, who grew up visiting Duke Gardens. Local affiliates WRAL and WTVD also aired Gardens features this year.

Grammy-nominated bluegrass legend Alice Gerrard filmed a live video of her song “Strange Land” for Indy Weekly in the Charlotte Brody Discovery Garden. You can see it by searching her name at indyweek.com. An Emmy Award-winning reality show producer developing a new show for the Lifetime network filmed a blind date in the Discovery Garden—a perfect setting to fall in love. And “Wayne Drop,” from the Durham Saves Water campaign, visited Duke Gardens for a photo shoot.

The website continues to draw an increasing number of visitors, and we have added new content to assist visitors and highlight the Gardens’ accomplishments and also its devoted supporters. The home page now has a “Connections” feature highlighting donors and members. And we increased the “call to action” boxes that showcase programs, rentals and Gardens news. We added more fill-in forms for rental inquiries and for people seeking photo reservations. Among the helpful features we’re working to add soon are interactive maps.

In social media, our followings on Facebook and Twitter are strong. And we are faring especially well in Instagram, the popular photo-sharing app, where our fast-rising following is at almost 1,000. The new visitor services coordinator will be devoting part of her time to assisting with social media, so we look forward to even more engagement with our online followers in the coming year.
Duke Gardens is an important part of every Duke student's college experience. We go there to relax, have picnics, enjoy the scenery, and play in the snow. It's our personal Garden of Eden in the midst of our challenging collegiate lives.
